Larry Robinson

round like the kind of fellow who shakes up "the system." The report from all points is that he is an outstanding young citizen. Good student in college. Captain of his basketball team. Handsome, personable, thrifty, trustworthy and brave.

But Larry Robinson certainly is rocking the beat and rattling some chains in pro football. Until July of this year, he had not played football since late fall of 1968 at Appomattox's Carver-Price High School. Now, he has almost made the 40-man roster of the Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League.

That is just not the way things are done. To make it in the NFL, you are supposed to have played college football. Robinson missed that experience, and if it hurt him any, they sure can't tell it down in Big D.

"He's a jewel," said Gil Brandt, vice president and personnel director of the Cowboys. "It would be a pretty broad statement to say that he's going to make our squad this year, but I think he will.

"Right now, I'm so excited about him. He's as green as grass. Doesn't know a thing about football. But his potential is so great he could put you in the Super Bowl in three years." Wow!

THE PATH from Appomattox to such effusive praise from Brandt has been a strange one for the son of Mr. and Mrs. Coleman Robinson.

A good fullback and flanker at Carver-Price, Robinson was a much better basketball player. he went to Ferrum Junior College in the fall of 1969 and, in his second year, he formed a fast friendship with the Panthers' new basketball coach, Martin Morris, formerly an assistant to Lewis Mills at the University of Richmond.

When Morris took an assistant coaching job at Tennessee after his only season at Ferrum, Robinson came along to Knoxville. As a junior, Robinson was a starter at high post and led the Vols to a share of the Southeastern Conference championship.

In his senior year, Robinson became only the second black ever to captain at UT athletic team.

The game program listed him at 6-5, he was actually 6-4. But UT fans thought he played about 8-0. Unfortunately, the pro basketball scouts didn't share that opinion. There is little market in the pros for 6-5 forwards and centers.

Robinson didn't even get a call in either the NBA or ABA draft, and the NFL certainly doesn't get excited about college basketball players.

Morris, however, met Brandt at a religious rally in Dallas, told the Cowboys' offical about Robinson's raw athletic ability, and suggested that somebody come to Knoxville to check him out.

WHEN THE COWBOYS' beef judge came to UT, he fund a sleek black kid who stood 6-4, weighed 220 and ran the 40-yard dash in an eye-opening 4-5 seconds. Tennessee had hoped to get eligibility for Robinson to play this fall, and when the SEC denied it, the Cowboys flew a scout to Knoxville and signed him to a free agent contract.

Had Robinson been granted SEC eligibility this fall, UT coach Bill Battle likely would have used him as a tight end. When Robinson reported to the Cowboys' pre-season camp at Thousand Oaks, Calif., Dallas coach Tom Landry put him at defensive back, Robinson was soon switched to running back, and there he found a home.

Since Robinson joined the Cowboys July 9, the team has made five roster cuts. He has survived all. The team is now down to 44 players, only four over the number the Cowboys can take into the regular NFL season. There is only one cut remaining, and if Robinson makes it past that one, he will be one of the success stories of the year in the NFL. In the Cowboys' first five exhibition games, Robinson ran the ball 13 times for 57 yards and one touchdown. He caught one pass for 14 yards, but he really made his mark as a kickoff returner, in which he averaged yards on five returns.

"The toughest thing for me to adjust to," said Robinson in a telephone interview Wednesday night, "is the mental attitude of the game. it requires tremendous concentration. You have to get used to the contact, too. In basketball there's contact, but it is incidental to the game. In football, contact is the object of the game."

Robinson knows he has taken a very unusual route to his present station in life, "but I won't say I'm surprised that I've done as well as I have. I'm glad. But not surprised.

"I'm not counting on anything. I'll know more in another week. Meantime, I have to keep working to try to improve my play."

Robinson said he has not been shunted aside when he has asked for help from veteran players. "Guys like Calvin Hill and Walt Garrison," he said, "will point things out to you when you make a mistake. They've helped me a lot."

With only one week left before the final cut, there isn't much more Hill, Garrison or anybody else can do to help Robinson make the team. Even if he doesn't make the final 40, Brandt's comments on Robinson indicate the team will not part with him under any circumstances. If Robinson is sliced, the Cowboys likely will protect him with the league's waiver mechanism.

Besides, The Cowboys already have had one good experience with a player who never played college football. Cornell Green played college ball Green played college

Besides, The Cowboys already have had one good experience with a player who never played college football. Cornell Green played basketball only at Utah State, and he's now entering his 12th season with the Cowboys. He has been All-Pro safety five times. Green, still a regular; now works for Brandt's scouting department in the off-season.

Strangely enough, the man who flew to Knoxville and signed Larry Robinson to a Cowboys' contract was Cornell Green."

color to the mall.

Sidewalks would be constructed of wood placed over the existing concrete in a manner commensurate with the 1865 theme. Brick paving was chosen for the mall to provide unity and integrity between the mall and adjacent buildings. Differing brick patterns define special areas, i.e. crosswalks, the wading pool and medalions. Benches have been placed throughout the mall for the convenience of shoppers Street lights have been chosen to provide sufficient illumination and to fit the 1865 theme. Mailboxes, trash receptibles and a drinking fountain are provided.

With the construction of the mall on Main Street. traffic would have to be re-routed through the Town. Parking would be located behind the mall and off Harrell Street.

Next week's article will present detailed drawings of downtown buildings and their renovation plus present an overview of "Economic Development - Tourism and Retail Trade" in Appomattox.

The Town Council will be meeting on Monday night, Sept. 17th, please express your views on this project prior to their meeting. This is not a project of the Town of Appomattox but of the citizens of the entire county . . . however the approval of council would be quite beneficial and members need to be aware of your interest before they are asked to take action regarding the Project - Downtown Appomattox.

Voters Urged To Register

Mrs. Joan Mahan, Secretary of the State Board of Elections, urged all Virginians who move their place of residence before the November 6, 1973 election to transfer their voting registration to the election district of their new residence. The last day to do this is October 6.

Mrs. Mahan noted that if a voter fails to move and the registrar of his change of residence from one place to another, and the move occurred more than 30 days prior to the election, such voter may not be permitted to vote.

Virginia law requires that a person to be entitled to vote must be a citizen of the United States, eighteen years of age, a resident of the Common wealth and of the precinct in which he offers to vote 30 days prior to the election and must be duly registered and otherwise qualified under the Constitution.

"I encourage all voters of the Commonwealth to make certain that they are registered to vote in the precinct in which they are residing in order that they will be qualified to vote in the November 6 election. If a person is not registered in the election district where he lives, he should immediately appear before the General Registrar of the county or city where he is currently living and change his registration," she said.

"We hope to be able to train the public to change their voting registration when they move at the same time they change their telephone and other utilities and the address on their driver's license and credit cards," Mrs. Mahan continued. "It is extremely important that people realize that they cannot go back to the place they used to live to vote unless they have moved within the thirty days immediately prior to the election in which they offer to vote. Voters are very unhappy when they go to the polls and the election official informs them that they cannot vote because they no longer have residency in that precinct," Mrs. Mahan said. "If we can just teach people to change their voting registration at the time they move, every voter otherwise qualified to vote will be able to participate in all elections."

1974 Chevy Cheyenne Super Pickup

Significant brake improvements are featured in the 1974 Chevrolet pickup line. Computer-selected brake systems are tailored to the loaded weight rating of the truck, as specified by the buyer, to give brake performance similar to that of a passenger car. With loaded weight ratings of more than 6800 lbs., a new hydraulic power assist is standard. Other improvements in the 1974 line include a larger displacement standard engine in most V8 models, full-time four-wheel drive in all 4 X 4 V8 models, interior refinements, four new colors, and optional bright roof drip moldings.
